Golden Opportunity: Our 50th Anniversary

by Tom Thoward, President, Camp de Benneville Pines Board of Directors

A 50th wedding anniversary is often referred to as a golden anniversary. In the Olympics, a gold medal is the highest honor. If something is considered superlative, it is said to set the gold standard. I could go on with such analogies, but the point is that by any measure Camp de Benneville Pines is in its golden age.

Camp de Benneville Pines has just passed its 50th year of operation since its founding in 1961. In that historic year there were many momentous events that would shape the future. Not only did the Unitarians and Universalists merge, but John F. Kennedy started his term of office as President and launched both the Peace Corps and the moon race. In the southern United States people were participating in Freedom Marches to try to end racial inequality, while in contrast the Soviets began building a wall in Berlin to prevent its citizens from seeking freedom in the West. While a number of Americans were digging bomb shelters, some Unitarian Universalists from the Pacific Southwest District, being of a more optimistic mind, began building a mountain retreat that would bestow beauty, joy, and serenity, on our community for many generations to come.

The purchase of what was to become Camp de Benneville Pines from the Boy Scouts of America for $40,000 (around $300,000 in today’s dollars) was just the beginning. It took the generosity of major donors such as Mrs. Theresa Hornet Patterson, who donated $40,000 to rebuild the lodge, and many others who contributed cash and sweat equity to realize the dream of owning a beautiful mountain retreat for UUs and their friends. (Please read the article by the Rev. Ray Manker, elsewhere in this issue, for more details about the creation of the camp).

The road for Camp de Benneville Pines from its humble beginnings to the present has not been without its bumps. In this regard, it is not that different from the life of its namesake, George de Benneville. De Benneville was an 18th century Universalist, born into a noble family in Europe. At several times in his life, de Benneville narrowly escaped death. The first time, at the tender age of nineteen, he was condemned as a heretic in France and sentenced to death by decapitation. At the last moment, while his head was on the chopping block, he was granted a reprieve by King Louis XV and encouraged to leave France. His second near-death experience occurred in his thirties while pursuing his second (or was it third) career as a physician in Germany. He contracted a fever from a patient and after several days was pronounced dead and prepared for burial. After forty-two hours in his coffin, he arose (apparently from the dead) and resumed his life. He later moved to America, married, produced six children and, up until his actual death at 90, led colonial Pennsylvania and New Jersey toward a deeper understanding of Universalism. He may even have befriended John Murray, who is credited with preaching the first Universalist sermon in America, which in turn led to the establishment of the Universalist denomination.

Camp de Benneville has also had its “near-death” experiences. By the mid 1980s the Camp was heavily in debt and had an ongoing negative cash flow. Faced with the possibility that the Pacific Southwest District would have to use its limited resources to subsidize the Camp operations even more, the District, with good justification, determined that the Camp should be sold and its assets liquidated to cover outstanding debts. Fortunately, there were camp supporters among those voting at the District meeting when this proposal was put forward. These visionary people could clearly see that, although well reasoned, the arguments for divestiture were shortsighted. They realized that once lost, the extraordinary resource represented by Camp de Benneville could never be regained. The proposal was voted down.

Shortly after that turning point the Camp Board of Directors determined that what was needed was a professional camp manager with outstanding people, organizational and financial management skills. They needed, in short, a person with rare talent to turn the Camp around. Here is the part of the story that can only be described as a result of “divine intervention,” because if the right person had not come forward at that point, the Camp would be history.

A member of the Conejo Valley UU Church who had been a camp director at a nearby Girl Scout camp in the 1980s heard about Camp de Benneville’s need and remembered an outstanding gal who had worked for her at the GS camp as a college student. They had not talked for several years, but she called her former employee and mentioned the job opening. (continued on page 3)

That former employee, as you have probably guessed, was Janet James, then one of the top selling real estate salespersons in Redlands. Janet was not interested in leaving a successful career to manage a nearly defunct camp in the wilderness. But she did agree to meet with the President of the Camp Board, Birdie Reed, and the camp's business manager, Ed Ewers, to discuss the Camp's needs. Janet had attended two programs at de Benneville, was familiar with the site, and had some thoughts about what the Camp needed to become viable. She met with the Camp's representatives in a nearby restaurant and shared her ideas for a couple of hours. She left the meeting thinking she had done her part and wished them well in their talent search.

After that meeting, the Camp Board of Directors diligently continued their search for just the right Camp Director for almost six months. They wanted someone who could implement the many ideas that Janet had given them. Finally, to the Board's great credit, they realized that the person they were looking for was Janet. She was called back, this time to meet with eight Board members, and after a lengthy meeting at Throop Church, Janet was offered the job, and to her own amazement, accepted. She remembers thinking on her way home, "What have I done, leaving a fabulous career in real estate to work for an outfit that admitted they don't know how they can even pay me?" But her husband Bob, hearing of her decision said: "Well, you need to find out what's right for you. You can always go back to real estate, if it doesn't work out." That was over sixteen years ago.

During Janet's tenure, the Camp went from a huge money drain to a viable, vibrant business with a diversified client base. The Camp is now in use nearly every weekend throughout the year and pretty much 24/7 during the summer months. During the past decade or more, the Camp has generated a positive cash flow every single year, in good times and bad. This is a remarkable achievement, especially over the last several years during a major economic downturn. Many Camps in the area have either closed or greatly curtailed operations during this same period.

But one thing that Janet (or anyone else) could not do was generate sufficient net income from Camp operations alone to replace and replace of its aging infrastructure. This led to the Camp's second "near-death experience." When I took over as Board President in 2009, the Camp's underground water system, some of which predated the purchase from the Boy Scouts, was on the verge of complete failure. The Camp's maintenance department had patched the pipes in many places, but it was starting to feel like a game of whack-a-mole, where as soon as you got one problem taken care of, another one popped up somewhere else.

A complete breakdown in the system would have meant a cessation in Camp operations, camp user contract defaults and loss of revenue. There was a very real possibility that the Camp could not survive a catastrophe of that magnitude.

2009 did not seem like a propitious year to begin a major fund raising drive. Many people were feeling the pinch of economic hard times. So it was with some uncertainty that the de Benneville Board of Directors in late 2009 launched what became known as the "Water Works!" capital campaign. I'll admit that when I stood in front of the District Assembly late 2009 launched what became known as the "Water Works!" capital campaign. I'll admit that when I stood in front of the District Assembly

Since the 18th century, Gospel music has been a spiritually sustaining force. Illiterate slaves used call and response hymns as a code to alert others when and where a bid for freedom would take place, as well as singing the songs to each other to foster strength and keep hope alive. Out of this fervent, soul-stirring tradition came ragtime, blues, jazz and other modern music styles. Gospel music is the only genre to outlive its original purpose, and continues today as a bringer of joyful inspiration.

Featured guest Ken Anderson has led Gospel music internationally. He is Music Director at the University of California San Diego and for the Martin Luther King, Jr. Community Choir of San Diego, and is on the music faculty of Grossmont College.

Come join your voice with others in the pristine pine mountains for a weekend of soul and song. Bring others from your church or choir to share a room.

Cost $150 per person. Upgrade to Craig's Cabin or Cabin 6: $25 pp.

From the Beginning
By Rev. Ray Manker

My first Unitarian connection was in Toledo, Ohio as an Associate Minister under Arthur Olson. I then had a Unitarian church of my own in Wayland, Massachusetts. After that I wanted to get back to a warmer, more southern area. I came out to California in 1955 to Riverside, historically a Universalist church, which also had taken in Unitarians prior to the merger. I’d been there a short time when the Universalist regional director asked me if I would do some district work. So I coordinated Southern California, Arizona, New Mexico, and west Texas. Before the merger came along I was asked to continue being the regional director, but I said no, I wanted to go back to parish ministry. So Arthur Olsen was hired, the person I’d worked with in Toledo, Ohio, and he became the first District Executive for the PSWD, since I was there when things first started. Most of the congregations in this area had merged about two years before the denomination did. That made it easier for me as well. After the main merger came along I was asked to continue being the regional director, but I said no, I wanted to go back to parish ministry. So Arthur Olsen was hired, the person I’d worked with in Toledo, Ohio, and he became the second District Executive.

The Pacific Southwest Institute of Religious Liberals (PSWIRL) was using Camp Radford as a summer family camp, not too far from de Benneville. They came to me during one meeting at Radford and said “Ray, we’ve decided we have to have a camp of our own,” as Radford had become too small, and asked me to go out and find a site. I formed a committee and we started searching, and we found the Boy Scout camp, Camp Aratuba. It was at about 6800 feet and seemed to be ideal. It had lost its main lodge to a fire; a wealthy donor had then given the Boy Scouts a new camp on a ridge near Lake Arrowhead, and so they put Aratuba up for sale. We decided to go ahead with purchasing it.

The Universalists had just sold two of their buildings, one each in Los Angeles and Hollywood. Since there were so few Universalist churches left in California, the money from the two sales was sent on to headquarter, but it was held for use in Southern California. So when we wanted to buy de Benneville, the Universalists wrote to headquarters to ask for the money at a later date. But the money originally came from the Universalists, and of Peter Haslund, UUA trustee from PSWD at the time, they just wrote agreed to let us use the money, but instead of a gift, they called it a long-term loan. But the money originally came from the Universalists, and we wanted to buy de Benneville. The Universalists wrote to headquarters to ask for the money, a sum of $40,000. Since the merger was just about to happen, they agreed to let us use the money, but instead of a gift, they called it a long-term loan with no interest or due date. Eventually, in 1986, with the help of Peter Haslund, UUA trustee from PSWD at the time, they just wrote off the loan. But the money originally came from the Universalists, and I wanted to make sure a Universalist name was on the camp. We chose George de Benneville, and hence the name Camp de Benneville Pines.

We needed some place to sleep besides just the tent platforms, and found that the US Government was selling WWII buildings at March and Edwards Air Force Bases. We had to bring all of these buildings in by truck and find a place for each of them. Fortunately, the district churches were heavily supportive of the new camp, and sent up teams of teens and adults to help with the building, as well as digging by hand a new sewer and water system. I was the first camp manager. Once the improvements were done, we had a dedication ceremony, and from then on it was heavily used by all the same churches who currently use it today. PSWIRL was pretty much the first and most regular user, continuing as a family camp; a second family camp was started by Religious Educators.

The USFS told us that we had to be open all year or else make the camp available for other groups to use when we weren’t using it. So the camp became year-round from its earliest days, even though that was not the original plan. We needed someone to stay in camp for year-round operations. We heard about someone in Minnesota who was willing to come do so, so we hired him and he stayed on-site. He initially moved into the nurse’s cabin, which was an original Boy Scout building.

Once we committed to year-round use, we had to winterize the transplanted buildings, as they had been living quarters down on the high desert. We had several people who were excellent builders. I remember one, Bob Land from Anaheim, who designed new porches for the cabins. We had to put foundations under the cabins, tear all the siding off for insulation, and then put new siding on. All the roofs had to be redesigned and replaced to carry the snow load. The swimming pool and bathhouse were already on site, and that was one of the main things everyone loved about the camp. There was an excellent well in existence too.

Mrs. Hornet Patterson of Throop Church was approached about paying for a new lodge, and she agreed after hearing of our vision and visiting the site. She asked that we name the building after her maiden name, Hornet. The only other original structure on the site was the little cabin which is now used by the Camp Director. It is a cute little house from the outside, but it certainly has its problems on the inside. If I remember correctly, it only has a bedroom, bath and small kitchen.

In 1963, after I declined the District Executive position, and Arthur Olsen came from Phoenix to take it, the Phoenix church was left open. So the Phoenix church hired me! I retired from First Church Phoenix in 1990.

The first year I was in Arizona, I brought my young people to summer camp at de Benneville. So Phoenix church members were involved from the beginning. First Church was a big church and took most of my time, so I wasn’t very active in the district after that. But both the PSWD and de Benneville Pines have managed well without my ongoing input, and for that I am forever grateful.

Growing the Faith, One Camp at a Time
By Tera Little, PSWD-UUA Field Staff

I first became a UU in 1994 in Arkansas. My son was born that year, and his dad and I said “Oh my gosh, what are we going to do? We need to take the baby to church.” I was very involved with La Leche League, and lots of those moms went to the UU church in Fayetteville. They said, “You’re going to love it. Our minister doesn’t mind if our nursing moms sit right up in the front row.” I went and fell in love very the first Sunday. Adrian’s dad wasn’t so sure, since he was Episcopalian and missed all the ritual, but it was my place. A few years later I became their DRE.

I came to California in August 1999, because I was hired as the Program Consultant for the district. How I came to be hired started when I came to de Benneville in 1998 for a Con Con, a continental youth conference for high school youth. I served as a youth advisor and was one of the first people to sleep in Craig’s Cabin. It had bunk beds but no living room furniture, so we had all of our meetings sitting on the floor. At that time I became aware that the PSWD had just done a search for a program consultant and hadn’t found anyone. Phyllis Daniel, a member of the UU Church of Long Beach who was on the UUA board at that time, overheard me saying that I might be willing to move for a job. “My district’s going to hire a person next year, are you interested?” I thought that sounded perfect, so while I was at Con Con I talked to Janet James about her vision for Camp de Benneville. Later that year the UUA flew me out to San Diego for an interview, and I found out that weekend that I had been hired. It was very exciting!

The job started as ¾ of my salary paid by the district and ¼ paid by de Benneville. After three years of the district and de Benneville in partnership, it was decided that the most logical step for growth was for the district to take the youth camps under its umbrella, so de Benneville could focus on what it does really well: run a great facility. After a couple of years, I became full-time for the UUA, running all the youth camps at de Benneville. One good thing it allowed for was more ministry to be associated with the youth camps, and it helped us coordinate more of our district resources for RE. For me, it was much easier to have just one board to report to.

At the time I was hired there were five youth camps – three in the summer, plus a Senior High and a combined Elementary/Junior High camp in the winter. At the first Elementary/Junior High camp I attended,

Carolyn Reed, who was the Dean, and I determined we needed to separate the Elementary and Junior High Camps. And by the next winter we did, and they have remained separate since, with the Junior High Winter Camp turning into a Coming of Age Retreat.

I've seen a couple of big moments in the life of the youth camps, just since I've been here. One came in 2003 when we did what we called "A Summit about a Mountain." We gathered together a group of 20 stakeholders – youth, young adults, youth advisors, religious professionals, and lay people. We spent a whole weekend in Craig's Cabin with Jesse Jaeger, who at that time was the UUA Director of Youth Programs, as our facilitator. We really looked at our vision for growth for the camps, not just in numbers but in depth of faith. Out of that weekend came a strong commitment to incorporate multiculturalism, faith formation, and a focus on our UU identity. I think we've done really well with that in the last decade.

Part of what helped make that happen was having a full-time person on district staff who was dedicated to this purpose. But it also took the hands and help of so many committed volunteers over the years. I hesitate to name anyone because I do not want to leave people out. However, two people really worked hard to create intentional UU camping communities. One wasKevin Drewery. He had just started his job as the DRE in Las Vegas when he came to the Summit, and promptly got hooked on camp. He was either Dean or Chaplain at camp from 2003 until a couple of years ago when he passed away. He played a very crucial role in bringing UU identity and meaningful worship to the camp. He was really close to the campers and staff, and along with Rev. Jim Grant developed a compelling model of camper-led and created worship. The other person is Kim St.

When I took this job I knew absolutely nothing about camping ministries, and it scared me to death. But it was the part of my job that terrified me the most. And after two years at the Summit I was asked to be Adult Dean for Senior High Camps. The CIT program alone really helped transform the camp. We developed an ongoing corps of young people intent on being counselors with a UU identity. Having this level of commitment from volunteers and staff, people who really believed in the vision, was a blessing.

Four years ago all of these young adults who had been through the CIT program and Senior High Camp, and who were now too old to come to youth camp, asked "Where's our camp?" That was a great question, and with the help and steady support of Alice King, the Director of Rites of Passage, and Young Adult Ministry at First UU San Diego, we jumped in. That first year it was very nerve-wracking to sign a contract with the camp for 60 kids to lease the Labor Day weekend, but we took the risk. This past September we had our fourth, very successful, Young Adult camp with over 110 people in attendance, and we are in the midst of planning for our fifth. Two years ago de Benneville and PSWD decided that the district should take on sponsoring a Family Camp as well, so we now have a full age-range of high quality camps that the district sponsors.

When I took this job I knew absolutely nothing about camping ministries, and it scared me to death. But it was the part of my job that terrified me the most that has turned out to be the most fulfilling. One day I won't serve our PSWD-UUA as Field Staff. It will be so hard to leave everything "camp" behind. I graduated from seminary in May 2010 and was ordained as a Unitarian minister in February 2011. I hope to do parish ministry at some point, and I'm really torn between two loves, the ministry with our district and camp and the parish ministry. Only time will tell, but for now, I'm here and looking forward to another exciting year of youth camping ministry.
Elementary Summer Camp: “The Gifts We Bring”
Sunday, July 1 – Saturday, July 7
Dean: Celeste Plumlee

Come hike, laugh, swim, sing and build community with other UU elementary kids from all over the PSWD. While fully embracing the UU values of social justice and environmental responsibility, we will also honor the gifts that we bring to the world as individuals and take time to celebrate our love for ourselves. “For each person is a blessing and there is great joy in getting to be exactly who we are meant to be!”

Campers are well cared for by trained camp counselors.

Junior High Summer Camp “Global Summit”
Sunday, July 8 – Saturday, July 14
Dean: Barbara Braswell

All week long campers will have an opportunity to participate in a simulation of real world decision making on a global scale. Working together, our junior high campers will learn how they really can create a fair and peaceful world. Campers will also participate in swimming, hiking, canoeing, archery, crafts and more!

A well trained staff facilitates the week.

PSWD’s Counselor-in-Training Program
Sunday, July 1 – Saturday, July 7, 2012

Do you love to work with kids? Do you have leadership skills? Do you want to be just like your favorite counselor? Then … C.I.T. is for YOU!

Join Facilitator Emma Rosloff for a week of intensive learning, sharing and fun. Learn about the history of Camp de Benneville Pines, develop age-appropriate workshops and worships, master conflict resolution skills and discover tips on leading successful camp programs. In addition to learning how to be top-notch counselors, C.I.T.s get time to bond with each other and become an integral part of the Elementary Camp Community.

C.I.T.s will also plan several all-camp events for the Elementary Campers. Training will take place in the first half of the day. In the afternoon, C.I.T.s will assist cabin counselors and program staff to gain practical experience. Space is limited to 8 participants. All applicants must be between the ages of 15 and 18.

Cost: $245 (no early-bird pricing). $75 deposit is required to register: application sent upon receipt of registration. Deposit refunded if applicant is not selected. To learn more, go to http://uucamp.org and click on “Register for Camp.”
“Summer Rendezvous”
A Camp for Homeschooling Families
Deans: Catherine Hanna and Kellie Rountree
Sunday, August 19 – Thursday, August 23, 2012
Come join other like-minded families for an exciting time exploring nature, relaxing and having fun! Splash in the refreshing pool, shoot a bulls-eye at archery, bask in a boat at the lake, frolic in the forest. Homeschooling families with kids (and grandparents!) of all ages come together to share experiences. Each family is encouraged to lead an activity based on their interests: hiking and crafts, games and enrichment activities, educational and environmental programs. Enjoy “family time” while the camp staff handles kitchen duty! You will appreciate the delicious home cooked meals. Each family is assigned their own room with bunk beds. Some double beds are available. Visit http://uucamp.org and click on “Register for Camp” to view all registration details. Discount pricing is available through June 17. This camp is limited to 100 participants. Camp fees include lodging, meals and most camp activities.

PSWD Young Adult Camp:
“Standing on the Side of Love”
Coordinator: Lauren Way
August 31 – September 3, 2012
Building Community, Deepening Faith, Creating Justice … the fifth annual young adult camp is an opportunity for 18 – 35 year old PSWD UUs to connect, dance, explore spirituality, delve into social justice issues, worship, sing, play, hug, nap, craft, laugh, cry, watch shooting stars, reunite with old friends, meet new friends … maybe get caught in a rainstorm? It is our long weekend to feel at home in the mountains. Together we stand. All with an emphasis on what it means to love with our whole selves: to stand for love, by love, with love, in love.
To register, visit http://www.connectuu.com
Cost is $160 - $250 sliding scale
For more information contact Lauren Way, laurenfway@gmail.com

“Ignite the Light! Reveal Your Heart!”
Friday, September 7 – Sunday, September 9, 2012 ♦ Dean: Lisa Harris
There are two ways of spreading light; to be the candle or the mirror that reflects it
–Edith Wharton
It's important to take time to go inward and connect with your inner light, and then to carry its spark into the world. Your heart is the vessel that holds this magnificent power, the radiant light of your true Self. Explore the art of revealing this light through yoga, meditation, time in nature, and a variety of other de-light-ful workshops.
Join us for a weekend of connecting to each other and to our bodies. Enjoy splashing in the pool, soaking in the hot tub, stretching in the forest, walking the labyrinth, meditating at the lake, relaxing with a massage. Good food and good company await you.
Cost: $180 per person ($165 pp by June 30). Price includes food, lodging, classes and activities (additional fee for massage, acupuncture, individual instruction). Upgrades: $30 pp for Craig's Cabin and Cabin 6. Thursday arrival $20 pp (Lodging only, bring picnic food. Friday dinner is first meal). Non refundable deposit: $75 pp must accompany reservation. Payment in full required by 8/15/12. No refunds after 8/16/12

12–Step Fall Mountain Retreat
Friday, September 16 – Sunday September 18, 2012
A weekend of self-care where you and your “inner child” can grow, heal, play, discover, reflect and work on yourself. We journey deeper into our recovery with enthusiasm through workshops, 12-step meetings, crafts, music, drumming, hiking, body movement, dancing and fellowship. All persons from ACA, CODA and similar 12-step programs are invited.

Thanksgiving Celebration: A Family Tradition
Thursday, November 22 – Sunday, November 25, 2012

Our intergenerational camp offered over the Thanksgiving holiday and weekend has become a tradition for many families. Enjoy a hassle-free Thanksgiving that will be the best you have ever experienced. The talented camp staff will take care of the shopping, meal planning, cooking and dishes ... and you get to enjoy your family and friends. Best of all, the prices are quite reasonable.

Attendees are asked to volunteer their services and talents by presenting a program or workshop over the weekend. Relax by the roaring lodge fire or get up and get energized on a hike in the crisp autumn air.

Adults: $190 * Youth (3 to 17): $140 * Children under 3: Free * Arrive Wednesday: add $20 pp (no food service offered until Thursday dinner) * Arrive Friday: subtract $20 pp * Craig’s Cabin/Cabin 6: add $35 per adult * Double bed in cabins 5, 7, 8 (two people required): add $35 per room * Non refundable deposit of $75 per person is due at time of registration * Cancellations must be received by October 25 for balance refund * Register online or send in the form on page 11 of this newsletter, or go to http://uucamp.org and click on "Register for Camp.”

Work Weekends 2012
Spring Work Camp: Friday, May 11 – Sunday, May 13
Fall Work Camp: Friday, October 26 – Sunday, October 28

Get out in the great outdoors and give yourself a little workout! Each year, the Camp hosts two work weekends, and the invitation is open to those ages 11 and older. Skilled and unskilled labor is welcome. Rake leaves, paint buildings, clean rain gutters, split wood, dust out the cobwebs ... ready the camp for winter or spiff up the place for summer. We have room for 60 energetic souls.

Delicious food and comfortable accommodations are provided to you in exchange for the sweat of your brow! Camp de Benneville Pines was built by the loving hands of volunteers ... and the tradition lives on with those who choose to help with taking good care of her.

Register online with a credit card and guarantee your reservation immediately – http://uucamp.org, click on “Register for Camp.” Or use the mail-in form below. Most events require a $75 per person non-refundable deposit. Your payment in full will be required prior to the event.

Our Mission:
The mission of Camp de Benneville Pines is to provide a mountain retreat where Unitarian Universalist principles and values are lived and celebrated in community.

Camp Purpose

• To provide a place to relax and recreate in life-affirming ways
• To provide a central gathering place for the Pacific Southwest District
• To provide a place for promoting life-long spiritual growth
• To develop leaders through volunteer opportunities/experiences
• To conserve a wilderness setting
• To extend UU influence in the larger community
• To encourage the expression of diverse ideas in a safe atmosphere of mutual respect
• To facilitate the ongoing process of community building within and among UU societies

Unitarian Universalist Principles and Purposes

We, the member congregations of the Unitarian Universalist Association, covenant to affirm and promote:

• The inherent worth and dignity of every person;
• Justice, equity, and compassion in human relations;
• Acceptance of one another and encouragement to spiritual growth in our congregations;
• A free and responsible search for truth and meaning;
• The right of conscience and the use of the democratic process within our congregations and in society at large;
• The goal of world community with peace, liberty, and justice for all;
• Respect for the interdependent web of all existence of which we are a part.

The living tradition we share draws from many sources:

• Direct experience of that transcending mystery and wonder, affirmed in all cultures, which moves us to a renewal of the spirit and an openness to the forces that create and uphold life;
• Words and deeds of prophetic women and men which challenge us to confront powers and structures of evil with justice, compassion, and the transforming power of love;
• Wisdom from the world’s religions which inspire us to live in harmony with the rhythms of nature.
• The right of conscience and the use of the democratic process within our congregations and in society at large;
• Jewish and Christian teaching which call us to respond to God’s love by loving our neighbors as ourselves;
• Humanist teachings which counsel us to heed the guidance of reason and the results of science, and warn us against idolatries of the mind and spirit;
• Spiritual teachings of Earth-centered traditions which celebrate the sacred circle of life and instruct us to live in harmony with the rhythms of nature.

Message from Janet James, Camp Executive Director

The idea of a unified Unitarian Universalist faith was talked about for many years, but it was not until 1961 that the symmetry and beauty of combining these two liberal religious faiths became irresistible to members, and Unitarian Universalism sprang into being in the United States.

Here in the Southwest, religious liberals were exploring the possibility of acquiring their own property in the San Bernardino Mountains to use as a new summer camp. The combination of the two faiths and the sale of Universalist properties in the L.A. area provided the resources needed to carry out this plan, and so Camp de Benneville Pines was born in 1961.

If the merger of Unitarianism and Universalism provided the “family structure” in the form of the UUA’s Pacific Southwest District, then Camp de Benneville Pines can be seen as its offspring. Our District and our Camp have grown together, and they have made steady progress over the last 16 years toward realizing their potential together.

We stand now at a point in history when the UUA is beginning to fully understand the importance of outdoor ministry to the future of our religious community and faith. Our Camp provides a portal through which our members can reconnect with nature and begin to consider how we can live the Seventh Principle of our faith and make a contribution to restoring a balance with our natural world. It is also a place where bonds between our religious heritage and our families and youth are developed and strengthened.

It has been my pleasure to serve as the manager of Camp de Benneville Pines since July 1, 1995. I have learned so much about our UU faith and have gained the friendship of so many wonderful people throughout the PSWD. The Camp has come of age, and development has continued. Many buildings were changed and the camp has been well loved and well used by hundreds of thousands of campers over the last 50 years. Camp feels cozy and warm, and it looks settled yet tenderly cared for. It has a vibrant pulse, and I believe the Camp to be the collective heart of the PSWD Churches.

It is my hope that many more generations of UUs will fill the camp over the next five decades, as the board and I set the course for another 50 years of growth and development up on the mountain top.
